From the time of the Tennessee Riverwalk’s inception in the 1980’s, the proposed terminus for this popular path has been Moccasin Bend. The North Shore Public Spaces project offers the opportunity to implement this connection, accessing the National Park’s 800 acres of recreational, scenic and educational resources.

The proposed North Shore Riverwalk is envisioned as a new shared-use path along or near the north bank of the Tennessee River from Renaissance Park and the North Shore commercial area on the east to the National Park unit Moccasin Bend on the west.

- Extend current Riverwalk by 1.1 miles
- Riverwalk along Manufacturer’s Road for portion near US-27 with connections to Renaissance Park
- Riverwalk primarily along the river for portions west of US-27
- Interpretive sites and overlooks
- Updated Riverwalk signage and branding to reflect themes identified by National Park Service
- Connect to trails and greenways on Moccasin Bend, Stringer’s Ridge and north to Red Bank

Conceptual design elements for the North Shore Riverwalk could vary from or blend with the South Shore to reflect the unique character of the National Park unit. Future development should follow high quality standards consistent with the existing Riverwalk.

The North Shore Riverwalk to Moccasin Bend is the culmination of the Tennessee Riverpark experience. It captures iconic downtown views and highlights the incredible natural beauty and the fascinating history of Chattanooga.
